THE COFFEE CAKE THAT CHANGED THE GAME

"DUE TO CURRENT BUSINESS TRENDS 99% OF OUR AGENDA TIME WILL BE SPENT EATING COFFEE CAKE."

OUR BEST SELLERS

Coffee cakes have been our best selling gift since we started mailing food in the early 1990s. Having tried a truckload of coffee cakes in the past two decades I can say quite honestly that I haven't tasted one I like better. I think the same goes for a lot of our customers—many folks return year after year to send this gift and this gift only. It's substantial, it's honest, it's straightforward, and it's really good. I guarantee you really can taste the difference.

THE ICING IS NOT ON THE CAKE

Zingerman's coffee cake is made without icing. This makes it look like an oddball compared to most coffee cakes out there. Nothing against icing—I like a cupcake as much as the next person—but too many times icing is a ruse. It's an atmospheric distraction. It diverts your attention from the sub-par ingredients that make the mass below. Plus, for many folks, me included, it's too sweet. Our coffee cake tastes like rich sour cream, butter, toasted walnuts and cinnamon. There's just enough sweetness, which makes it go down easily, especially with coffee.

WHAT ABOUT THAT PAN?

You can't make a Zingerman's coffee cake without a bundt-style pan, the pan with the hole in the middle. It conducts heat to the interior of the cake—if the hole wasn't there, the middle would stay raw and collapse in a soggy puddle. The bundt pan we know was created by Nordic Ware in Minnesota in the 1950s at the request of Rose Joshua and Fannie Schanfield, two members of Minneapolis's Hadassah Jewish women's group, who were nostalgic for dense European cakes.

Cinnful Cinnamon Rolls

Almost anyone can make a cinnamon roll smell good while it's baking, even among the cell phone kiosks at the mall. Unfortunately, most have little more than aroma to offer. You won't taste much beyond sugar and cinnamon. The real challenge is to fashion a cinnamon roll that tastes as good as it smells. These fit the bill. Warm them up, break one open and put your nose up close. You'll smell sweet butter, Indonesian cinnamon, real vanilla. But the real treat is next. Take one bite. That's all you'll need to forget the litany of cinnamon roll disappointments life has dealt you. Comes with serving instructions.

CHOCOLATE RAISIN BABKA

Babka is a sweet loaf, both fluffy and rich, kind of like a light textured coffee cake with a dense filling swirled throughout. In the late 19th Century, babka was made with leftover challah bread dough wrapped around nuts or jam. Now the master bakers at Zingerman's Bakehouse have given babka a flavor update worthy of the new millennium. Rich with butter, swirling with chocolate and cinnamon, and studded with golden sultana raisins, our babka bursts with chocolatey sweetness. Wrapped in tissue and gift boxed.

WHAT IS ZINGERMAN'S, ANYWAY?

Zingerman's Deli opened in March of 1982 with a staff of two, a small selection of great tasting specialty foods, a host of traditional Jewish dishes and a short sandwich menu.

Today Zingerman's is a family of small food-related companies in Ann Arbor, Michigan. We focus on traditionally made full flavored foods — making them and finding them. We are funky, fun and sometimes a little strange. Most of all, we love to share great food with everyone.

WHY ZINGERMAN'S BUSINESS GIFTS?

A.K.A. STUFF WE DO SO YOU DON'T HAVE TO.

CONCIERGE

One person will take care of everything personally, from start to finish.

TASTE

CUSTOMIZATION

Delete food, add food, change gift boxes. Whatever you'd like. We make every gift to order, so we can customize just about everything.

SWAG

Mugs, totes, hats, pens: as long as it fits in our gift boxes, we'll include any of your own merchandise at no additional cost.

TOOLS FOR YOU

Need a quote for internal approval? We can do that. Want an Excel file summarizing a prior order? We can do that, too.

TRACKING

We'll do it for you. No need to click fifty links to check on fifty boxes.
